- You may want to have a go at the two activities to help check your understanding of classification now.
- Challenge - Think about two of the animal groups you have just learned about. Firstly, identify a list of at least five animals within that group. What are the things that those animals have in common? Write two or three sentences to describe the features that scientists would use to group these animals together. You may wish to include illustrations of some animals and to show similarities between the creatures you have chosen.
